Locally-focused Work: Pueblo

Pueblo is one of nine communities that the Foundation is working with as part of our locally-focused work, which complements our traditional grantmaking. A local focus on specific communities allows us to build relationships, learn and support long-term efforts that emphasize community-informed, collaborative solutions to health barriers. Why? Because when ideas are generated at a local level, they are more likely to reflect the community's needs and create lasting change.

We hope you will join us in our work in Pueblo. Sign up for updates on the work we are doing in your area, upcoming events and to learn more about the Foundation's efforts to bring health in reach for all Coloradans.
