Pulse: Interview with Pollster Lori Weigel

As we near Election Day, what is going to be on Coloradans' minds as they cast their votes?

In the final stretch before Election Day, I shared some thoughts on how health-related issues may be impacting the mood of voters in Colorado and across the nation. In my interview with Bazi Kanani, learn more about how results from our recent poll could play out in the election and upcoming legislative session.

The Colorado Health Foundation believes in listening first, and that's why we've created an annual poll to hear the perspectives of adults from across the state. From affordable housing and hunger to mental health and the impacts of the coronavirus, this poll takes the pulse of Coloradans on a range of important health issues this year and every year – to inform policy far into the future.
