

The Colorado Coronavirus Survey: Key Findings

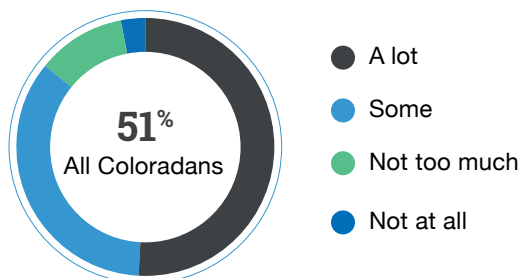

IN APRIL 2020, THE COLORADO HEALTH FOUNDATION AND HEALTHIER COLORADO PARTNERED WITH MAGELLAN STRATEGIES TO CONDUCT A SURVEY OF COLORADANS ON THE CORONAVIRUS OUTBREAK. THE GOAL WAS TO UNDERSTAND THE EXPERIENCES, CONCERNS AND NEEDS OF PEOPLE FROM ACROSS THE STATE AS THEIR LIVES ARE IMPACTED BY A GLOBAL PANDEMIC. THIS IS WHAT WE LEARNED.

Coloradans fear the worst has yet to come.

People of color, people living on low incomes (making $30,000 or less) and women are more likely to say the worst is yet to come.

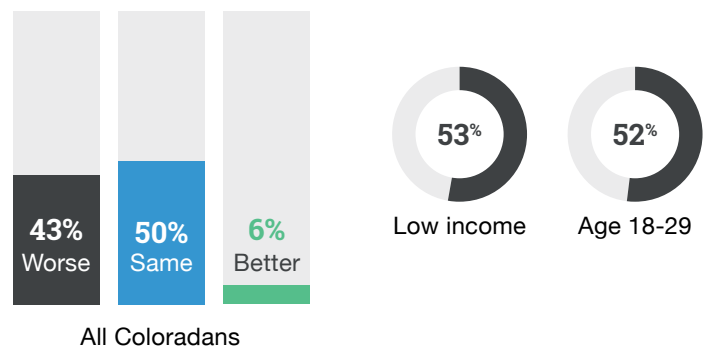

A majority of Coloradans say their lives have been disrupted by the coronavirus outbreak.

Coloradans living on low incomes and young people are facing financial hardship.

They report that their financial situation has gotten worse since the coronavirus outbreak.

More Coloradans say it's difficult to pay for basic necessities.

Since the outbreak, more than one third of Coloradans report having difficulty paying for food, housing, utilities and health care.

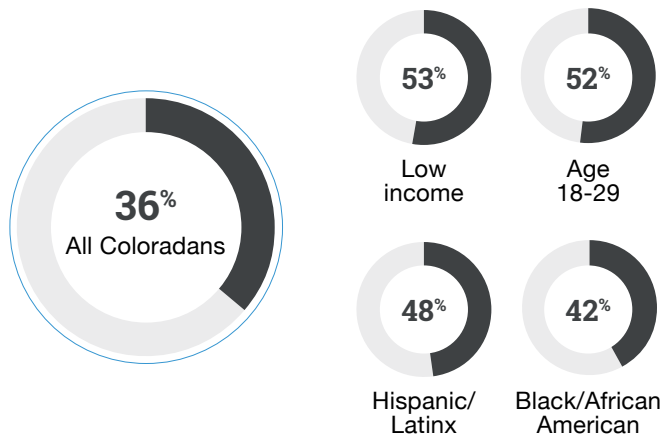

The Colorado Coronavirus Survey interviewed 1,000 Coloradans, plus an oversample of 100 Black/African Americans. The survey has a margin of error of +/- 3.1% at the 95% confident interval. Survey respondents were representative of the state of Colorado and weighted based upon 2019 U.S. Census population estimates. Where percentages do not add up to 100%, what remains are those who refused to answer the question.

The Colorado Coronavirus Survey: Housing and Homelessness

CONCERNS ABOUT HOUSING AND HOMELESSNESS EMERGED CLEARLY IN THE SURVEY. WITH INCREASING NUMBERS OF COLORADANS STRUGGLING TO PAY FOR THE ROOF OVER THEIR HEADS TO A MAJORITY WORRYING ABOUT HELP NOT BEING AVAILABLE FOR THOSE WHO NEED IT – ENSURING THAT SAFE, AFFORDABLE HOUSING IS IN REACH MUST BE A PRIORITY FOR OUR STATE.

Many Coloradans are worried about paying for housing.

People who make less than $30,000 and young people are especially concerned about being able to pay the mortgage or rent in the next 12 months.

Coloradans are concerned for those who are struggling to keep a roof over their heads.

8 in 10 are worried that help won't be available for people who are homeless or struggling to afford their rent or mortgage.

A majority believe the government should do more to ensure housing assistance is available.

Coloradans want the government to ensure there is assistance to Coloradans who are struggling to pay their rent or mortgage.

Coloradans want the government to ensure there is assistance to Coloradans who are homeless.
