

The Colorado Coronavirus Survey: Key Findings

IN APRIL 2020, THE COLORADO HEALTH FOUNDATION AND HEALTHIER COLORADO PARTNERED WITH MAGELLAN STRATEGIES TO CONDUCT A SURVEY OF COLORADANS ON THE CORONAVIRUS OUTBREAK. THE GOAL WAS TO UNDERSTAND THE EXPERIENCES, CONCERNS AND NEEDS OF PEOPLE FROM ACROSS THE STATE AS THEIR LIVES ARE IMPACTED BY A GLOBAL PANDEMIC. THIS IS WHAT WE LEARNED.

Coloradans fear the worst has yet to come.

People of color, people living on low incomes (making $30,000 or less) and women are more likely to say the worst is yet to come.

A majority of Coloradans say their lives have been disrupted by the coronavirus outbreak.

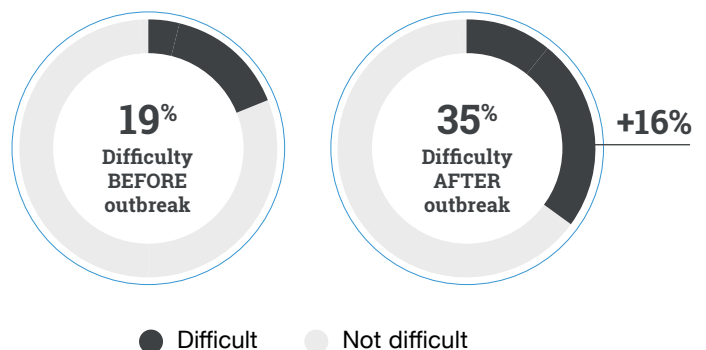

Coloradans living on low incomes and young people are facing financial hardship.

They report that their financial situation has gotten worse since the coronavirus outbreak.

More Coloradans say it's difficult to pay for basic necessities.

Since the outbreak, more than one third of Coloradans report having difficulty paying for food, housing, utilities and health care.

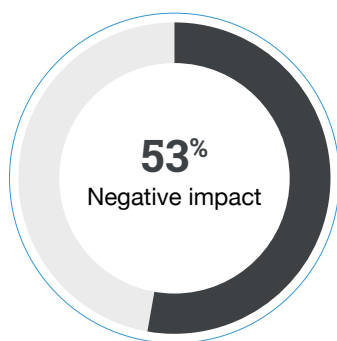

The Colorado Coronavirus Survey interviewed 1,000 Coloradans, plus an oversample of 100 Black/African Americans. The survey has a margin of error of +/- 3.1% at the 95% confident interval. Survey respondents were representative of the state of Colorado and weighted based upon 2019 U.S. Census population estimates. Where percentages do not add up to 100%, what remains are those who refused to answer the question.

The Colorado Coronavirus Survey: Mental Health and Wellness

JOB LOSSES, KIDS AT HOME, SOCIAL ISOLATION – THE REASONS COLORADANS ARE FEELING WORRY AND STRESS ARE CLEAR. WHAT’S LESS CLEAR IS WHETHER MENTAL HEALTH SUPPORT WILL BE AVAILABLE FOR THOSE WHO NEED IT. THE LONG-LASTING EFFECTS OF THIS CRISIS ON MENTAL WELLNESS REMAIN TO BE FULLY SEEN, BUT PRIORITIZING THE MENTAL HEALTH OF INDIVIDUALS AND FAMILIES IS A MUST.

Over half of all Coloradans say that the coronavirus has negatively impacted their mental health.

For many, worry and stress have had a major impact.

● Major negative impact ● Minor negative impact ● No impact

Many Coloradans are concerned about lasting negative impacts to mental health.

People living on low income (making $30,000 or less) and those who have lost their jobs or income are especially worried.
